Throwing pebbles at penguin not on

THUMBS down to a group of Sea Scouts observed throwing pebbles at an obviously distressed little penguin at Mothers Beach, Mornington, on Saturday, September 23.

To the leaders of these kids, why are you not supervising them better and informing them of the need to care for our wildlife?

She is now recovering in care at a Frankston wildlife shelter.

Thumbs up to the people who assisted in the capture of a mother brushtail possum and baby on Saturday morning (September 23) in Frankston.

Without your support at the time with traffic control and passing of equipment, this may not have gone so smoothly.

Thumbs down to the lady spraying poison on weeds in a water flow area in Stotts Lane on Saturday, September 16, who did not believe me that this could potentially kill local frog populations and also ducklings that are hatching at this time of year.

Please think before you spray pesticides and the location you do it in next time. A bit of research goes a long way.
